REAGENTS

for the Preparation of Antigens

THE preparation of antigens for the laboratory diagnosis of syphilis by means of the more generally employed complement-fixation, precipitation and flocculation tests requires carefully standardized reagents. For this purpose Difco Serological Reagents are unexcelled.

- BACTO-BEEF HEART is carefully selected and trimmed fresh beef heart tissue thoroughly desiccated and reduced to a powder. It is prepared from a large number of hearts, thus assuring a uniform and polytropic product from which sensitive and stable antigenic extracts are obtained.
- BACTO-CHOLESTEROL is a highly purified sterol prepared expressly for use as a sensitizing agent for antigens. Extracts reinforced with Bacto-Cholesterol are rendered extremely sensitive, possessing higher antigenic titers without greatly altering their other properties.
- BACTO-CORN GERM STEROL is prepared particularly for use as a sensitizing agent to fortify the antigen devised by Dr. Harry Eagle for use in his flocculation test for syphilis.
